WebMaster Jim is still working on updating the website. The calendar is in progress, and there have been other issues that we are still discovering. For example, we have learned that we are not yet in complete control of the website, so it is still pending, and discussion about what to do about is still ongoing. PayPal is set up for payments, and is now working properly. Clicking on the link "Join the Sooners" takes you to the page to register, and PayPal is listed. Clicking on "PayPal" will result in a page to pay, not only with PayPal, but also with some other options, including the credit card payment. If you have any questions, please contact a board member. All board members and their phone numbers are listed on the front page of the Scuttlebutt.

There are still two committee duties available (Refreshment & Hospitality). If anyone would like to take advantage of these volunteer opportunities, please let us know.

Jim's Tech Tips

"Infrared (IR) Thermometer Guns"

These little IR thermometer guns are amazing. I use mine to check coolant temperature at the outlet of the engine, look for cool spots on radiators, check tire sidewall temperatures, and to see if all of my brake drums are at about the same temperature after a hard brake (to confirm even braking action at each wheel).

If you are going to get a reliable, consistent, and reproducible reading with these guns, you need to understand a bit about how they work. When you aim the gun at something and press the button to read the temperature, the gun reports to you the average temperature of everything within its "Field of View".

Field of View

The meter's field of view is 12:1, meaning that if the meter is 12 inches from the target, the diameter of the object under test must be at least 1 inch. Other distances are shown in the diagram below. Make sure that the target is larger than the unit's spot size. The smaller the target, the closer you should be to it. When accuracy is critical, make sure the target is at least twice as large as the spot size.

If you want to read the temperature with a spot circle diameter of $\frac{1}{2}$ " (a very handy size), you must hold the gun 6" from the object. I have seen some guys hold the gun several feet from a radiator hose and not understand why the reading is so low; their 3" diameter spot circle includes a lot of cool air on either side of the radiator hose. Get in the habit of holding the gun up close to the object for the best readings.

Some guns have a laser pointer built in that helps you see where the temperature readings are being taken. The laser does not read the temperature, it just helps you see where the reading is from. You have to visualize the spot circle size, depending on how far the gun is from the object.

I hope this helps you get more out of your IR thermometer. If you don't have one, they are handy to have around the shop and on the road.

Until next time, Have a Model A Day!

Slide Fasteners

By Perry Jones, Piney Wood Model A Ford Club

Although not common during the Model A Era, the slide fastener, or what we now refer to as a zipper, could be found in an array of items. One example is the Saks Fifth Avenue advertisement to the left which is from 1931 The New York Times, featuring a Sports Wear outfit with a suede blouse with the "convenience of a talon fastener".

History

The story begins when Elias Howe, Jr., inventor of the sewing machine, received a patent in 1851 for an "Automatic, Continuous Clothing Closure." Howe's device was more like an elaborate drawstring than a true slide fastener, but because of the success of the sewing machine, Howe did not pursue marketing his clothing closure system.

Forty-four years later, inventor Whitcomb Judson marketed a "Clasp Locker" device, similar to the system described in the 1851 Howe patent. Being first to market, Whitcomb got credit for being the "inventor of the zipper." However, his 1893 patent did not use the word zipper. The Chicago inventor's "Clasp Locker" was a complicated hook-and-eye shoe fastener. Together with businessman Colonel Lewis Walker, Whitcomb launched the Universal Fastener Company to manufacture the new device. The clasp locker debuted at the 1893 Chicago World's Fair and was met with little commercial success. The Universal Fastener Company moved to Meadville, Pennsylvania, where it operated for most of the 20th century under the name Talon, Inc.

Slide Fasteners

By Perry Jones, Piney Wood Model A Ford Club

It was a Swedish-born electrical engineer named Gideon Sundbäck whose work helped make the zipper the hit it is today. Originally hired to work for the Universal Fastener Company, his design skills and a marriage to the plant-manager's daughter led to a position as head designer at Universal. In his position, he improved the far from perfect "Judson C-curity Fastener." When Sundbäck's wife died in 1911, the grieving husband busied himself at the design table. By December of 1913, he came up with what would become the modern zipper.

Sundbäck's new and improved system increased the number of fastening elements from four per inch to 10 or 11, had two facing-rows of teeth that pulled into a single piece by the slider and increased the opening for the teeth guided by the slider. His patent for the "Separable Fastener" was issued in 1917.

Naming the Zipper

The term 'zipper' is said to be derived from the 'zip' sound the invention makes when zipping, first used in 1923 by the American B. F. Goodrich Company. The company opted to use Sundbäck's fastener on a new type of rubber boots (or galoshes) and referred to it as the zipper, and the name stuck. The two chief uses of the zipper in its early years were for closing boots and tobacco pouches. Zippers began being used for clothing in 1925 by Schott NYC on leather jackets.

Slide Fasteners

By Perry Jones, Piney Wood Model A Ford Club

In the 1930s, a sales campaign began for children's clothing featuring zippers. The campaign advocated zippers as a way to promote self-reliance in young children as the devices made it possible for them to dress in self-help clothing.

The Battle of the Fly:

A landmark moment happened in 1937 when the zipper beat the button in the "Battle of the Fly." French fashion designers raved over the use of zippers in men's trousers and Esquire magazine declared the zipper the "Newest Tailoring Idea for Men."

Zippers in the Model A Era:

Within the MAFCA Fashion Guidelines, there are six mentions of slide fasteners or zippers. "Slide fasteners or zippers, were discussed in men's tailors' magazines, but were not commonly used in the fly until after the Model A era. They could be found in pockets or down the front of coveralls (as seen on page one)."

"To the left, a heavy washable cotton suede cloth that looks like fine suede leather and wears almost as well. This three-piece set, with sliding rustproof fastener, is practical for boys and girls."

Additionally they were found in both men's and women's golf bags for the ball and shoe compartments.

Slide Fasteners

By Perry Jones, Piney Wood Model A Ford Club

The two images to the left are from the same Talon advertisement found in the 1931 Ladies Home Journal. "Traveling Case – equipped with a Talon Slide Fastener. It can be opened or closed in an instant – but it can't come open accidentally." If you are heading to the beach "The very newest knitted bathing suits have a Talon Slide Fastener at the back of the jersey. Beach pajamas are cotton mesh and Talon-fastened at the side. And the polo shirt of cotton mesh is Talon-fastened, too – at the front."

While the Slide Fastener did exist during the Model A Era, they were not as accepted and used like they are today.
